This 7 week course will run every Thursday from 23rd January — 5th March from 7pm – 9.30pm (there will be no class on Thursday 27th February)

Saturday 29th February will be a Full day of Practice (10am—4pm)

Some of the topics that will be covered include:

- Why Meditate?
- Learning to relax in a sustainable way
- Different meditations for different mind states
- Meditation and its role in helping stress, anxiety & depression
- The practice of mindfulness in our daily lives
- Bridging formal meditation & mindfulness in life

Course restricted to a maximum of 18 participants

We meditate not to have a temporary nice experience, rather we meditate so we can deal more effectively with any of life's experience.

Life is for many of us becoming increasingly busy. That business usually results in increased stress. Stress affects both body and mind.

Sleeplessness, a constant avalanche of thoughts may be accompanied by anxiety, depression and a feeling that life is spiralling out of control. High blood pressure, headaches, tummy problems, general malaise and low energy can manifest.

Meditation and mindful living helps to gain a stability of mind where we are not at the mercy of life's moving tides or the myriad of thoughts and emotional states that seem to sabotage our happiness and peace of mind.

To help maintain a sense of well-being and basic sanity whilst living in a modern speedy world the skill of Mindful Meditation is essential. The essence of Mindfulness is being relaxed and aware in the present moment.

This short seven week course will provide you with the basics needed to begin living your life more in the here and now. It will help you to train in maintaining a steadiness in life even while there is turbulence around you. This stability of mind results in an inner peace.

The course will be primarily practical with most of the time spent learning and practicing different meditation techniques. A certain amount of theory will be presented to enable a deeper understanding of the skill of meditation. There will be an opportunity every week for feedback, personal questions and discussion.

The day of Mindfulness Practice on the 29th February will be an easy-going and varied day, providing an opportunity to practice what you have learnt over the previous 5 weeks. This will be followed by a concluding evening session on 5th March 2020.

Participants are requested to do a small amount of meditation practice as well as mindfulness exercises and reflection between sessions.
